Abstract

Purpose of the study: This paper will discuss the application of maqasid al shariah as a benchmark in the Corruption Measurement Model (CMM) based on Maqasid Syariah. Dimensions to be assessed on maqasid al shariah based on the opinions of Syathibi include hifdzun Dhin, hifdzun an-nafsh, hifdzun al-aql, hifdzun an-nasl, and hifdzun al-maal.

Methodology: In addition to successfully formulating all the relevant details of maqasid al shariah for corruption measurement, this study is the first research that uses quantitative methods like ANOVA on data from all provinces in Indonesia.

Main findings: The result is the average score from the Corruption Measurement Model (CMM) in Indonesia which is found to be good enough. The empirical study using ANOVA shows that there is no significant difference in the maqasid dimension among provinces in Indonesia, with a significance of 0.05.

Self Help

Applications of this study: The results of this study enables researcher, practitioner and policy maker to understand the implication of corruption and its impact on the society.

Novelty/ Originality of this study: The application of maqasid al shariah is tested to explain the impact of corruption on the inadequacy of infrastructure and inefficient bureaucracy.

Dear Author/s,

First of all, on behalf of ICOMFIN 2017 organizing committee, I would like to congratulate and thank you for your commendable effort as author/s of your article/s for the Special Issue that is supposed to be published in Pertanika JSHH this year. We appreciate very much the invaluable effort that all of you have taken extensively during the writing process and understand that such an effort must be rewarded with appropriately in the form of the promised Special Issue publication.

Unfortunately, due to the sudden change of Chief Executive Editor of Pertanika from Dr. Nayan Kanwal to Prof. Dato' Dr. Abu Bakar Saleh last July, we were informed by the new Chief Executive Editor that all Special Issue that are suppose to be published in Pertanika for the year 2018 and 2019 have been put on hold pending review by the new management. Therefore, we have alternatively seek a new journal to agree in publishing ICOMFIN 2017 Special Issue. And we are happy to inform you that Humanities and Social Sciences Review (HSSR), a recently approved journal to be indexed in Scopus (e-mail as image attached) has agreed to published all your articles in two (2) issues.

We have sent all the articles to the Chief Editor of HSSR for further action in terms of necessary processes needed to be undertaken to
